Neither rain, nor sleet, nor a predicted 10 to 15 inches of snow can put the brakes on a good cocktailer, dahling. On Friday, more than 50 artfiles skied their way down to Morgan Contemporary Glass Gallery on Ellsworth Avenue to toast the opening reception of AAP in 3D, a multimedia sculptural exhibition celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh.

"I came from the South Side. It took me three times as long to get here, which is why I'm 45 minutes late," mused artist Val Cox.

While newscasts were predicting mass pandemonium and concerned citizens were lined 20 deep at local grocery stores to stock up on supplies, most of the guests, including gallery owner Amy Morgan; AAP patron chair Zivi Aviraz; artists Judi Charlson and Jeffrey Phelps; Craig Falatovich; Richard Parsakian; Evan Aiello; Rick Hawkinberry; Nachum Golan; and Angela Love took the impending Snowmageddon in stride.

"Oh no, I'm not concerned," smiled artist Dana Ingham, who has seen enough snow to last two lifetimes. "I'm from Erie."
